Labour and the Tories are banking on a return to the 'old normal'. That's not what voters want | Rafael Behr

Guardian (Politics) · Wed, 14 Jan 2026 06:00:17 GMT

An economic recovery could still change the parties' fortunes. But the days when only two parties were licensed to supply Britain with prime ministers are gone. Unpopular politicians take consolation in the thought that opinion polls are sometimes wrong and often describe the wrong thing. They capture the moment but don't

The City has moved on from Brexit

City AM (News) · Wed, 14 Jan 2026 04:55:00 +0000

Whisper it, but Brexit is slowly inserting itself back into our national conversation. We remain, thankfully, a long way from the frenzied tribalism of the referendum campaign or the energy-sapping parliamentary drama that followed, but while these days Nigel Farage may be more interested in small boats than backstops,
