With Nige still sulking, Honest Bob was left to unveil Reform's latest 'policies' | John Crace

Guardian (Politics) · Wed, 26 Aug 2026 15:26:34 GMT

The sense of futility hanging over the room was almost overwhelming as Robert Jenrick took the stage It's turning out to be one of the longer sulks in Nigel Farage's already sulk-filled career. Few politicians are better at having a strop and holding a grudge than Nige. At least on this side of the Atlantic. Donald Tru

Andy Burnham should rip up our undemocratic first past the post system – even if some in Labour disagree | Neal Lawson

Guardian (Politics) · Wed, 26 Aug 2026 15:00:16 GMT

Rearguard reactionaries may try to block the idea of a national commission into proportional representation, but we should want more not less democracy A poll in the Mail on Sunday at the end of June was remarkable. It had not just Reform as low as 21%, but also Labour and the Tories. It was remarkable because it stark

Reform to slash HMRC officials' pay if taxpayers wait too long

City AM (News) · Wed, 26 Aug 2026 14:49:32 +0000

HMRC officials would be fined and dismissed if they keep taxpayers waiting too long to deal with government services under a Reform UK government. If Nigel Farage becomes Prime Minister, customer services officers at the tax collector would have their pay tied to performance levels and be required to keep waiting
