To the people voting for Nigel Farage: is this really the finger you want on the red button? | Marina Hyde

Guardian (Politics) · Tue, 29 Sep 2026 11:42:24 GMT

The Reform leader's reaction to the RAF Fairford affair is again revealing. If what's needed is a steady hand and cool head, he's not the guy. Another week, another chance for Nigel Farage to demonstrate his literally hysterical leadership inabilities. For a guy who supposedly valorises the wartime British spirit, Nigel

Keir Starmer

Burnham has a clear vision for Britain – but not for how it fits into a troubled world | Rafael Behr

Guardian (Politics) · Tue, 29 Sep 2026 17:27:01 GMT

The Labour leader has set out his plans with passion and ambition, but the story he tells lacks a vital chapter on managing global chaos. Andy Burnham is at home at Labour conference, and not only because it is in Liverpool and he has Merseyside roots. The prime minister is native to his political tribe wherever it goes.

Burnham's emotional solo act had Labour in raptures – but his promises will take time to come good

Guardian (UK News) · Tue, 29 Sep 2026 17:13:39 GMT

PM's speech, written almost entirely alone, was full of radicalism but his biggest plans will have to wait until after the next election Key takeaways from Andy Burnham's conference speech Hope Again is the conference slogan. But what felt even more apt was Try Again. Just forget about the last two years, after the par
